The General Assembly adjourned late Tuesday night with few positive results over the final 2 days. The House and Senate failed to compromise on key bills and left Frankfort with too little accomplished and expectations of having to return for a Special Session later this spring.

Placing blame on the lack of substantial session results seemed to be the only action late in the day. In recent sessions, the House Democrats generally acceded to the Senate Republicans on late session bills. This session, however, the House stood firm and refused to compromise on Senate demands, especially the proposed reforms to state employee pension plans. Governor Ernie Fletcher's administration was a minor player throughout the session and was unable to broker any deals. Some said there was an overall lack of leadership in the GA to consider issues outside of politics.

The GA was in stalemate when the House refused to consider the entire Senate proposed reforms to the state employee pension system. The Senate plan called for additional funding via a bond issue and a change in the retirement benefit plans for new state employees. The House would agree only to the additional funding portion. The Governor came out in support of the Senate plan even though he had already created a blue ribbon committee to study the entire issue and make recommendations by Dec 1. By forming this committee, he had laid the groundwork for state employee pension reform to be a major issue in the 08GA. The stalemate was that the Senate plan basically superseded the committee while the House was content to wait for the committee report. Other bills were held up in each chamber waiting for action on the state pension issue. It turned out that the failure to reach compromise on the state pension issue led to the failure to act on other bills.

Significant bills left on the table included HB 5 dealing with alternative energy reform, HB 262 providing new spending for various projects, including the Wolf Creek Dam area and the Kentucky Horse Park and SBs 1&2 providing new funding and incentives for math and science educational programs.

Significant bills passed include HB 207 improving mine safety, HB 305 raising the minimum wage to the federal level over the next 2 years, HBs 536&549 providing new economic development incentives, SB 59 improving job safety for social services workers and SB 83 raising the speed limit to 70 mph on certain interstates and parkways. Several bills allowing veterans' family members' easier access to health care and education also passed.

Gov. Fletcher has repeated his threat to call a Special Session later this spring to re-consider some of his spending proposals, issues surrounding the Wolf Creek Dam project and the state employee pension issue. The call is expected to be made after the primary elections on May 22 to allow tempers to cool and provide time for additional negotiations. The Governors' race probably has some impact on the timing too.

Telecom Issues

Fortunately, telecom issues were not caught up in the stalemate on state pension reform.

Last week, the Governor signed SB 74, a bill authorizing the Department of Local Government to promote statewide broadband development and deployment. The provisions of the bill should also provide ConnectKentucky with permanent state funding.

The Governor also signed HB 82 requiring junk dealers to keep better records of copper transactions and make more complete reports of such transactions to local police. This should help prevent copper theft of facilities or, at least, provide for easier prosecutions.

Other telcom related bills passed and expected to be signed by the Governor. HB 360 will conform state law to the telecom portion of the multi-state streamlined state sales tax pact not previously adopted. HB 230 will restrict the use of mobile phones by school bus drivers. It passed the Senate (38-0) on Monday. HB 430 does away with the state do-not-call list and adopts the national list for compliance with the state telemarketing laws. The House concurred (98-0) with the Senate version on Monday.

Ins & Outs

GA in a funk over Tubby? It could not be officially confirmed but one reason for the GA's lack of action this week may have been the many side discussions on the pros and cons of the departure of UK basketball coach Tubby Smith to the University of Minnesota. It turns out that the House even generated controversy passing a resolution (HR 248) honoring his accomplishments at UK. Although the resolution passed by a 99-0-1 vote, many UK supporters questioned why a representative from Louisville didn't vote?

The Governor has appointed Mark P. Freeman, Bluegrass Cellular, to the CMRS Board as the Tier III carrier representative. Forest M. Skaggs was reappointed as the KTA representative.

Renovations to the Kentucky Exposition Center in Louisville are almost complete and will make it the 6th largest facility of its kind in the nation with over 400 acres of exhibit space. New technology will allow exhibitors upgraded telecom services such as variable bandwidths of internet service, the ability to create VPNs, unlimited access to VoIP and hardware rentals. WiFi hotspots will also be located throughout the facility.

Looking ahead. The 2008 session is scheduled to convene Jan 8 for 60 days. Look for many of the same issues to be at the forefront, in addition to the biggest issue – the budget.
